Horn Demands Criminal Action Against Carmel Police Officers; Goes to D.A.

Fred Horn, whose wife accused Carmel Police Officer Ed Jelich and Chief of Police Roy Fraties of man-handling her when she refused to sign a traffic citation, yesterday demanded of Assistant District Attorney Charles McHarry that criminal action be brought against the Carmel officers. Carmel people who witnessed the struggle between Mrs. Horn and Officer Jelich when he arrested her Wednesday afternoon are asked to telephone Horn at Monterey 5885 or Monterey 3306.

Mrs. Fred Horn, Monterey, accused a Carmel police officer of "tough" behavior, of twisting her arm, pushing her face against the steering wheel of her car and mauling her around violently when she refused to sign a traffic citation Wednesday afternoon. Her accusation took the form of a letter of protest to the city council presented by her husband Wednesday night.

She also charged that Chief of Police Roy Fraties shoved her violently into a chair in the police office when she attempted to telephone her husband.

P.T.A Offers New Location for 'Teen Age Club Room

Owing to the efforts of the P.T.A., it may not be necessary to use the dressing room space under the Forest Theater stage as the site for the proposed Carmel 'Teen Age Club.

At a meeting held last night in the council room in city hall, Mrs. Robert Stanton, president of the P.T.A. proposed the small building next to the barn at Ocean and Junipero as a suitable location for the club and said that the P.T.A. would pay the nominal rent that would be charged.

In urging the new location, Mrs. Stanton said that it was wisest to begin the club on a small scale and with relatively slight expenditure of money and then after it was found that the club was succeeding with the young people, it could be enlarged.

Also, the club should be centrally located. The Forest Theater in its out-of-the-way location would be difficult to police. In this she had the support of Chief of Police Roy Fraties.

Before offering her suggestions she had asked the opinion of James Fontana, a personnel consultant at Fort Ord, who before his entry into the army had wide experience in recreational projects for young people in Chicago as he was connected with a neighborhood house, a community center and a WPA recreational project. He had found the Forest Theater unsuitable because of the cost of repair, $2000, too much to invest until the club project had had a trial period and showed that it would succeed. He saw the proposed location at Junipero and Ocean and thought it much better suited for the purpose.

The meeting was called by Mrs. Carmalita Benson of the A.W.V.S. for the purpose of forming an executive committee of citizens to sponsor a 'Teen Age Recreation club.

The meeting was still in progress when the Pine Cone-Cymbal closed its forms.

Walter Nielsen Not a Candidate For City Council

Walter Nielsen stated definitely to the Pine Cone-Cymbal Thursday afternoon that he is not a candidate for city council.

"Friends have asked me to run," Nielsen said, accounting for the rumor that has circulated through the town for the past week. "But as much as I'd like to serve, I can't at present, as I am too busy."

Nielsen is one of the "Nielsen Brothers", proprietors of the grocery store of that name, and has been a Carmel resident for twenty years.

Getsinger Completes Survey for Board With Inland Trip

School Superintendent J. W. Getsinger, returning Wednesday from a three day trip in which he visited four six-year secondary schools, said that in all cases the authorities had expressed satisfaction with the system.

Getsinger's trip winds up a survey he is conducting for the Carmel School Board members to furnish them with information that will help them to determine if their post war plan should provide for sufficient construction to allow for a six-year instead of a five-year school at the high school. Increasing enrollment at Sunset makes necessary either moving the seventh grade up to the high school or building additional units at Sunset. The school board has under consideration both possibilities but needed additional information before arriving at a decision.

To the forty questionnaires sent out by Getsinger last month thirty-six six-year schools have returned answers. This material will be incorporated with that gained by the visit into a report to be presented at the board meeting Tuesday night at the high school.

The schools visited range from small plants in a rural district, Kerman, with an enrollment of 378 and Dos Palos, 540, to two large city schools in Fresno.

In describing his trip yesterday, Getsinger said that part of it was "on the thumb." He got a ride to Fresno with friends and returned on the bus.

Council Stands Pat On Zoning Ordinance

The city council for the third time Wednesday night denied the petition of the Monterey Ice Delivery to set up a vending machine in a restricted zone. Council members agreed with the ice company representative that the site chosen was suitable in other respects but refused to rewrite the zoning ordinance on the grounds that to do so would create a precedent that would eventually lead to the break down of the zoning laws.

LIONS DONATE

The Carmel Lions Club voted to contribute $20.00 toward buying prizes for the Kite Festival at its meeting Tuesday evening.

Guest speaker was J. Darling of Monterey high school science department. Bob Atwater of Oakland was a visitor and Franklin A. Chadwick the new member.

D. L. James

Mr. D. L. James, known and respected in Carmel over a period of more than a quarter of a century, during which time he has maintained a summer home at the Highlands, died suddenly on Wednesday, March 8, at his home in Kansas City, Missouri.

Mr. James was born in Kansas City, the third generation of a family engaged in the wholesale exporting of china, a business established by his grandfather. He was a graduate of Yale University and studied for some time at Oxford. A schoolmate and close friend of the late Theodore Criley, he and Mrs. James came first to Carmel in 1914 to spend a summer with the Criley family, returning the following year and soon thereafter purchasing the property at the Highlands on which he erected his great, rambling stone house, long a distinctive landmark of the Peninsula. Since 1914 the James family has spent all but one summer in Carmel.

In addition to his business activities, Mr. James throughout his life took a keen interest in the arts, of which he was a generous patron in many fields. He served as a trustee of the Nelson Art Museum in Kansas City and was president of the Kansas City Symphony Orchestra. He took especial delight in the drama and was the author of several plays which found their way to production and translation into foreign languages. Possessed of an unusually lovable personality and distinguished by the courteous manners of old-fashioned chivalry, D. L. James (for by these initials alone was he known) inspired wide and lasting friendships.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. D. L. James of Kansas City and Carmel; a son, Daniel James, of Hollywood; a brother, Mr. Thomas James of Kansas City and three sisters: Mrs. Louis Egan of St. Louis and Mrs. Helen Dunlap and Mrs. Ross Hill, both of Kansas City.

SON FOR LT. WOOLRICH, JR.

A son was born on Wednesday, March 8, at the Community Hospital to Lieutenant and Mrs. Willis R. Woolrich, Jr., of Seventh and Casanova streets.

Willis G. White

By S. E. W.

Rev. Willis G. White died at the age of 76 on Thursday, March 2, following a long illness. He came to Carmel to spend the years of his retirement after a life rich in service, was well known here and loved by many. Especially should his memory be dear to the children as he was the founder of Carmel's Kite Festival.

He was born in Kentucky, the son of Rev. and Mrs. William White, graduated from the Southwestern University and later from Theological Seminary in Tennessee. He was also an alumunus of Columbus Theological Seminary, Decatur, Georgia, and a member of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity.

Following six months' travel abroad, he became pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Charlotte, North Carolina, but resigned to go with his mother and sister to Southern California to take care of his brother, William, who had returned, broken in health, from his missionary work in China. Af-

Gambee, Desert Painter, Opens One-Man Show at Gallery Wednesday

BY IRENE ALEXANDER

Thirty water colors by Martin Gambee comprise the new one-man show which is scheduled to open at the Carmel Art Association Gallery on Wednesday, March 15, and continue until the middle of April. On display in the De Young Museum, San Francisco, throughout the month of February, this collection has already been hailed by critics as a noteworthy contribution to American art, illustrating as it does for the most part the impact of the remote and primitive upon a sincere artist with an eye for beauty as well as a profound understanding and respect for the simple, friendly aspects of life which he has encountered in his nomadic travels.

In appearance Martin Gambee does not at all suggest the nomad he is at heart. He is neat, compact, reserved; it is only when one draws him out by infinite questioning that he reveals his original and humorous slant on the world around him. He is not voluble about his experiences. He is satisfied to let his brush speak for him.

Of mingled French, English, Dutch and German heritage, Mr. Gambee was born in Newark, New Jersey.

"I didn't like the place," he supplements dryly; "so I left when I was six weeks old, and grew up in Buffalo, New York."

There he graduated from the technical high school, his determination to specialize in art dating from his grammar school days, when he successfully evaded doing lessons in English by drawing maps for the teacher.

"That's why I can't read and write," he protests cheerfully.

Following his advanced art studies at Pratt Institute in Brooklyn, he produced commercial art for the next five years in New York, and during this time he married Margaret McMurry, daughter of the noted Professor McMurry of Columbia University Teachers' College and author of the McMurray Geographies, standard texts in the schools throughout the country over a period of years.

In 1930, when their son Frank had just passed his third year and their daughter Anne was two months old, Mr. and Mrs. Gambee packed the offspring and belongings, including a years' supply of powdered milk, and set out for Paris. The time had come to desert commercial art for serious painting.

"I went straight to the Academie Julian because I didn't know any better," he explains, "but we parted by mutual consent after a

Dr. Ewan Talks on China and Thibet

By KATHRYN LANSDOWNE

James Douglas Ewan, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Salinas, was guest speaker on Monday afternoon for the Carmel Woman's club, giving an interesting account of his personal observations in China and Thibet.

Dr. Ewan, the son of a medical missionary, was born in Cheng-tu, the City of Heavenly Rest, on the Street of the Four Sages. This ancient city, famed in the time of Marco Polo, is still a rich metropolis with clean streets and canals, the capital and administrative center of the Province of Sze-chuan, and from its position on the banks of the river Min, overlooking wide, fertile plains. Its old temples are set in beautiful grounds, where strut plentiful flocks of peacocks. Disease is an ever-present problem there, however, leprosy being most prevalent.

Four Chinese men, at different times, became patients of Dr. Ewan's father and later came together to discuss the military affairs and work out the destiny of their country: Chiang-Kai-Shek, now Generalissimo, and often referred to as the Cromwell of China; Wu Pei-fu, the "Old Spartan"; Feng Yu-hsiang, called the Christian General and Chang Tso-lui, a great Manchurian war lord, six feet in height and weighing 240 pounds, whose laugh rattled the windows and who boasted of being able to sit in a game of poker for 30 hours without a sensation of weariness.

Thirty miles from Cheng-tu is the border of Thibet, and during the summer Dr. Ewan's father often made pilgrimages to the interior to enjoy the beautiful scenery of Mt. Everest and to hunt wild animals, chief among which are leopards, smaller than lions, but far more ferocious. On one of these trips he met two brothers from America whom he quoted as using the expression "Gee Whiz!" on all occasions. They were Kermit and Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., who were hunting panda. Wild duck is so plentiful that flocks of 500,000 are often seen; tall trees, ferns higher than a man's head, wild orchids and gardenias are abundant because of the rainfall which sometimes reaches ten feet in a year.

Thibet is a place of great contrasts and more travelers visit this part of Asia than any other area of the same size. Many stone villages are found in the southern part, while the northern section is largely used for grazing. Pfamba, a porridge made of tea, dried and powdered mutton and butter, is their native drink, found to be very beneficial in preventing scurvy. If one is allowed to dip his own bowl, which he always carries with him, into the family pot of porridge, he knows he is

BISHOP PARSONS SPEAKER

Bishop E. L. Parsons made an address on Unity last week at the luncheon meeting of the All Saints' Women's Auxiliary. At this meeting an innovation was introduced, a five-minute survey of world church news by R. Ellis Roberts. Mrs. Vera Peck Millis presided and Mrs. John W. Dickinson led devotions. At a committee meeting held later, the secretary, Mrs. Whitney Palache, announced that membership is now sixty-two. Mrs. L. A. Quinn was chairman of the luncheon committee.

Thank you

CITIZENS of MONTEREY PENINSULA

you've done your country a vital service

Never in the history of America has food meant so much to national security.

To feed the men of our armed services, our allies and the folks at home, we in the food industry were asked to pack more food than ever before.

There were fewer regular employees available to do it. So we in turn, asked for help. We asked the cooperation of all our old employees. We asked the cooperation of the people of this community—and of civic leaders and organizations generally.

Hundreds of patriotic citizens responded.

Many who came to work in the Del Monte cannery were people without previous experience and already busy with other war duties—but willing to help the relatively few remaining old-timers who loyally turned out to get the job done. For the enthusiasm, patience and cooperation of all, throughout the very trying period, we are most grateful.

We think this has been as fine a demonstration of patriotic civilian spirit and cooperation as any in this war. Maybe you helped Del Monte out—perhaps you helped some other canner. In either case, this is a message of thanks to you. You can take pride in this contribution to your country's wartime needs.

Japan Stronger Now Than Ever, Says Dr. Wing Mah

That Japan had no intention of attacking the United States mainland at the time of the attack on Pearl Harbor is the considered belief of Dr. N. Wing Mah, economist and professor at the University of California, who spoke at Sunset auditorium on Tuesday evening in the Adult Forum program. He believes Japan's purpose was to destroy our fleet so that she could carry out the conquest of Asia, the Philippines and Netherlands East Indies with little opposition.

Similarily Nipponese did not care at that time to overrun Australia, but did desire to prevent that country from going to the help of Singapore, Malay and the Dutch possessions. With a rather long outline of Japan's attacks on Manchuria, China, Burma, and other Oriental countries, the speaker showed reasons for his belief that the immediate purpose was the gaining and cementing control over a huge area rich in vital raw materials and easily enslaved natives. This area Japan would protect with a ring of fortified islands to hold off any opposition.

From the first attack on Manchuria in 1931 the Chinese have had no illusions about Japan's intentions; they saw only slavery for themselves, such as the conquerors had imposed upon Korea after its defeat in 1910. An unwarlike people, desiring peace and civilized life, yet the Chinese were in time united in the purpose to resist. They have made the best possible use of their resources, cut off though they have been from mor than a trickle of supplies and war materials. The large but ill-equipped army has avoided pitch battle, has retired and destroyed everything of value to the enemy, drawing out the Japanese lines and encouraging guerrilla tactics, until the enemy was bogged down, with overlong supply lines and insufficient forces.

Another view that is contrary to that of many persons in this country, Dr. Mah believes Japan is actually stronger militarily than at the time of the attack on Pearl Harbor. There has been no interference to her war production, and she has control of all strategic materials of a huge and rich area. The country is both military and naval minded, and is, according to the speaker, the strongest of the Axis powers; she can be defeated by action chiefly from the Chinese mainland, and the present American drive through the Central Pacific is promising. The Philippines may be an alternative base for attack.

After the war China should have a large part in affairs in Asia. Signs point to her becoming a modern democracy, as all the younger generation are heart and soul for such a government. It may differ from our type of government, but, as the speaker said, "It is comparable to what I find in this country." The communist party is not really communist, but has a program aiming to relieve the long miseries of the peasants, who constitute 85 per cent of the people. The Chungking government probably will adopt the same program, but there looms a political struggle for power. There might be civil war, but many hold the slogan, "China should never fight China," and the country should become the leader of peace in the Orient.

that occasioned the letter to the council was Ed Jelich, Chief Roy Fraties said after the meeting.

After listening to the letter, the mayor referred it to Police Commissioner Bernard Rowntree for investigation with instructions for him to report back to the council at its next meeting.

"I hope you are not going to try to white-wash this," said Horn, "because if you do, you haven't heard the last of it. My wife is in the hospital tonight suffering from nervous shock. Her ear is also injured from being struck."

"We are not in the habit of white-washing things brought to our attention," said the mayor. "But I think we have the right to investigate complaints before acting."

According to Mrs. Horn's account, she had noticed a car following her when she picked up her three daughters at Sunset school at 3:30. The children identified it as a police car. Mrs. Horn said she had noticed this car following her on other occasions. On her way out of town she stopped at the Standard service station on San Carlos. When she started up Ocean avenue she noticed the car following her again. At the intersection of Ocean and the state highway she stopped and went back to the police car and demanded to know why the officer was following her. According to her letter the following conversation took place.

"I have a right to follow you," he said. "Let me see your driving license."

"Here it is," she said, "and the car license too. But why are you following me?"

"Because I have a report that there is a drunken driver, and I'm looking for him," he said.

She then demanded her driver's license and he started taking her license number. She asked him to get his foot off her car so she could go home. He said he was giving her a citation: "The remarks above do not convey the attitude or the belligerent, unwarrantedly 'tough' behavior of the officer."

Mrs. Horn refused to sign the citation because she said she thought it was an admission of guilt. The officer said she would sign it or he'd take her to jail. In his attempt to drag her out of the car, the struggle took place as described above. However, when the children began crying and begging her to sign the citation to put an end to the struggle she said: "I'll sign but you are going to hear about this." Whereupon the officer continued to maul her around and said, "No, by God, you won't. I'm going to take you to jail." Several army officers and high school students witnessed the scene.

According to Mrs. Horn, Jelich brought her down to the police station in his car leaving her children alone in the car by the side of the road. When they arrived at the city hall, Mrs. Horn says she was again manhandled when she mistook the entrance of the city hall and started for the neighboring doorway.

Up in the police station, she said, Chief of Police Roy Fraties pushed her violently into a chair. She was not allowed to use the telephone to call her husband, but was told that she could use the phone when she reached the Monterey jail. Judge Ross was finally summoned and he released her on her own recognizance.

Chief Roy Fraties' comments on her charges were: "When I came in she had complete charge of the office. I took her by the arms as you would take a spoiled child and sat her down in a chair. She had already created a scene on the street, bcause as I came up, several people said "Ed sure has a bob cat by the tail." Of the telephone incident he said: "It is against rules of this department to let people use the phone. The Monterey police department allows them to make three calls on the telephone when we take them over there."

Chief Roy Fraties took her back to her car on the hill, and he says, offered to drive her over to Monterey if she was too nervous to drive herself.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

Blind Pianist Entertains

On Wednesday morning there was a special assembly concert by Miss Rose Reswick, noted blind pianist and entertainer. She also presented a demonstration of the work of her "Seeing Eye" dog, Ilsa, and demonstrated the making of Braille books for the blind. The concert was directed by the Blind Transcribers Society of Palo Alto. At the end of the program donatons were made for the use of the Society in making Braille books. —Dean Hogue

Rehearsal

Miss Estelle Beeson, the dramatics teacher, introduced the play, Rehearsal, presented Monday in the high school cafeteria, by telling a little about the history of all girl cast plays. Her little talk was delightful and got the play off to a good start.

Ann Bates, Anne Gambee, Molly Osgood, Janet Strasburger, Joan Carr and Mary Gregory were the members of the all girl cast. Rehearsal, as the name of the play implies, is about rehearsal of a play at a girl's school. Mary Gregory with her Irish accent and Anne Gambee's drawings, which had the students in a constant roar, were the highlights of the play. The other girls played their individual parts very well.

The Treasury Flag

Our Minute Man Flag, that now waves over the Carmel high school, means that the students have been faithfully purchasing War Stamps and Bonds. For the last two months the student body has kept the sale of War Stamps up above 90%. This month we only reach 90% and in order to keep our flag we must not fall below that figure. We are intent on reaching 100% by the end of March. —Stanley Ewig

The Senior Sadie Hawkins Dance

Last Saturday the Senior class of C. H. S. gave a Sadie Hawkins Dance which went over in a big way.

The decorations were really something to talk about. There were huge pictures of Hill Billies, signs with wisecracks on them and many other interesting features.

The next big surprise of the dance came in the form of the refreshments. It wasn't just the usual drink of some kind of soda pop but they had punch with real fresh fruit in it, and to top it off, they had sundaes with cookies.

The high moment of the evening was the entertainment. The Seniors put on their famous Freshmen production called "Carmel Suzie," which they had made during their Freshmen year at the Carmel High. This went over very big with the kids and they all showed a lot of spirit at the dance. Many came dressed for the part—short jeans, torn shirts, and strawhats were part of some of the costumes seen floating around the cafeteria dance floor.

Seniors working hard to make the dance a success were, Del Wilson, Carla Lepori, Barbara Bolin, June Quinn, George Moller and Betty Powell.

The chaperones for the evening were Mr. and Mrs. Moller, Coach and Mrs. Rudd, Miss Sheldon and Mrs. Brey. —Emile Passailaigue

Girls' Basketball

These last two Fridays the girls have played some swell games of basketball. On Friday the 25th of February the Freshmen and Sophomores played two games. The Sophomores won one game 18-13 and the Freshmen won the other game 16-12. The final score however was the sum of both games giving a good break for the Sophomores. They won 30-29. The second game was on Friday the 3rd of March. This game was between the Freshmen and Juniors. Two games were also played in this one too. The Juniors won both games. One score was 12-9, the other was 13-4. As was expected, the Juniors won 25-13, but the Freshmen put up a swell fight. The next game is between the Sophomores and Juniors, which should be a whopper.

St. Patrick's Day Food Sale Planned For Building Fund

The Carmel Mission Altar Society and the Junipero Serra Mothers' club are combining forces under the joint chairmanship of Mrs. F. A. Cox and Mrs. Gertrude Stoney to hold a sale of food, aprons and pot-holders on Friday, March 17, in the building formerly occupied by the Village 5 & 10 on Ocean Avenue.

Proceeds from the sale will go towards a new building for the Notre Dame school, now housed in Villa Angelica, and rapidly outgrowing its quarters, with this term's enrollment of 84 students.

Plans for the new building, which will be erected in the compound of Mission San Carlos de Borromeo, call for the use of adobe bricks and an architecture in keeping with the restored Misson.

Mrs. Leffingwell Outlines Benefits At Demo. Club Meet

By EDNA M. OWINGS

At the regular bi-monthly meeting of the Carmel Women's Democratic club, held here recently at the home of Mrs. Ernest Leffingwell, the members passed a resolution expressing their appreciation of Mr. George Outland's activities and their endorsement of his attitudes on national affairs during his tenure of office as Congressman from this district.

The inability of the principal speaker of the afternoon to be present, at the last minute, left time for general discussion, pointed by a recapitulation by Mrs. Leffingwell of the benefits accrueing to the nation during the past ten years, such as bridge and road building, forest conservation, availability of power, stabilization of banks, training of men in various skills, and building up, through CCC camps, of health and vigor, all of which now serve to facilitate the business of war. To these domestic benefits are added furtherance of friendly relations with South and Central American Republics, recognition of Soviet Russia, and the unprecedented avowal of intention to relinquish our hold on the Philippine Islands as soon as the war is ended.

Mrs. Paul Low described enthusiastically a bond rally conducted by Filipinos, at which she and her husband were guests, and Mrs. Stuart read a portion of a letter from Mrs. Charles Tillett, who had been the first speaker at the Jackson Day Dinner in Washington, D. C.

Hereafter the club will meet once a month, preferably in some centrally located place.

Sanitary System Survey Ordered By Board Members

A survey of the sanitary system is to be made to determine what repairs and improvements will be needed in the near future, it was decided at the regular monthly meeting of the Carmel Sanitary District Board members Monday night in their rooms in Sundial Court building.

Though no major construction involving large expenditures of money is contemplated by the members, they plan to discuss maintenance items and minor improvements that are likely to be required in the future so they can have an orderly schedule of work arranged when material and labor are available, and instructed Secretary Bernard Rowntree to make a survey of the system and present them with a list of such items.

Rowntree's financial report for the month showed a balance of $2570.48 after payment of bills to the extent of $2608.22, $1260 of which was paid to the City of Carmel in compensation for the sewer cleaning work done for the Sanitary District by the city street department.

WAC REPLACES SERGEANT

Pfc. K. C. O'Leary, WAC, replaces Sgt. Thad McCarthy who has been in charge of the U. S. recruiting station here for six months and who will return to district headquarters for combat training.

Pfc. O'Leary is on duty at the recruiting office in the Chamber of Commerce building in Monterey.

"While more and more of our men are asked to face the uncertainty of battle, women are asked to fill the jobs left vacant by them," she says. "Now is the time for women to enlist in the Army of the United States."

ACRES STILL GO OUT TO SEA

By Malcolm D. Whitman, Jr.

An elderly lady, 37 years a resident in Carmel and still spry and observant, speaks most fondly of evenings when the level in the Carmel River has been high and the sheet of water has held a mirror to the surrounding beauty. After rains like the recent ones, though, Carmel River really begins to handle water, and this volume, surging against the natural guard bar of coarse sand, must top it or else find a weak point in it, and scouring swiftly down to bedrock, spew a long brown tongue into the green sea. Thus, under heavy rains, our acres from upriver, the cream of them skimmed as rich topsoil full of growth nourishment, are borne along by speeding waters to become a dull brown stain against the ocean's sheen.

Engineers have it that to make water drop all but the finest silt, you have only to slow it down. Behind the San Clemente dam up Carmel River much silt so settles out as the flow of the feeding streams spreads and slows in the lake and little silt, even in flood time, tops the spillway or sloshes down the fish ladder. The acres we see as a brown stain on the ocean are drawn largely from the land below the dam, nearer to Carmel, from the artichoke land, from between the roots of growing plants trying to hang onto their livelihood but not succeeding well enough.

Six years ago a group of people took to riding the Carmel River during spate time. A pleasant, sociable business, they say, little kayaks fraternizing with couples sprawled on air mattresses, and everybody with a picnic meal along. From some point where a road nears the river upstream these sports would drift down to join company with the less organized but more numerous fishermen at the mouth of the Carmel River. Unless the spate was high, the rafts and kayaks would often ground on the way down. Fishermen, too, have always lamented the lack of water and of fish cover near the mouth after the spate has pushed through and scoured its swift, narrow channel in a sweeping, violent rush.

Two years ago an organization was nearly formed to bring this matter to popular attention. Even a name was chosen, the Carmel Rod and Raft Club, represented by Ken Carleton who spoke for the fishermen, Malcolm Tarpey, who spoke for raftsmen, boatmen and property holders, and myself, who spoke for an idea I called Multi-Mouth and volunteered to ask for some engineering opinions in support of it. These opinions I never got, but still, since its I doing the writing, I'll put Multi-Mouth ahead of the fishing and the boating. Ken Carleton has been busy in Carmel since, and Malcolm Tarpey has left it.

Multi-Mouth consists of the idea of many small concrete channels mounted in the natural guard bar of such a river as Carmel River and located, all of them but one, above normal mouth-basin water level. When a spate comes down filling the mouth basin no one of the Multi-Mouth channels, each of which is Venturi shape so that it will build a delta by spreading and slowing the flow out of it, will handle all the water, but each will handle enough of it so that together the mouths get rid of the entire spate without the spates having to scour out a channel through the guard bar. The result of such an arrangement would be that the acres would settle in the mouth basin instead of being carried out to sea, for in the basin the water would slow down.

The engineers I should have consulted could tell you how many acres to expect, but not much about what they might do to Mr. Carleton's concern, the first. With a Multi-Mouth in place the mouth-basin, denied its natural cutting and scouring release, would fill up with water and in time with sand and silt. If then left to its own devises, the guard bar would advance oceanward as the basin bottom built up to a higher delta, and the supplies kept on coming. This would confront trout and steelhead with shallow water, and you would see the bigger ones scurrying with mad energy in search of cover in which to rest. That was the trouble of the Carmel Rod and Raft Club, the engineering and fishing personnel had to see eye to eye about such things and never found time to. Mr. Murphy's sand machine on the guard bar eats various grades of sand, and could get a steady diet while scooping out fish cover, but so far as I know, neither the fishing nor the engineering department of the Carmel Rod and Raft Club ever approached Mr. Murphy about this.

Nor did the division of boating and property holding get very far. Mr. Dienelt, proprietor of the Mission Ranch, did, I believe, hear mention of possibility of boats passing his place, and may have heard, several times, the hum of the boating division's pioneer outboard motor bucking chosen spates. Two boat companies have shown designs for boats ideal for spate-bucking, but these not to become available till after the war when, you may take the boating division's word for it, it will prove easy to run miles up the river, even in fairly large boats. But the artichoke growers were not consulted as to how they would like a controlled river level so as not to have to send diggers down to the guard bar to dig a start for the yearly scouring channel. The property holders' division skirted the idea, too, of asking if the growers would like to purchase cream top silt (which would no longer go out to sea when the Multi-Mouth should be installed). And both the property holders' and fishing division quailed at the idea of proposing that the sand and gravel dug away to provide fish cover be used to raise poorly drained sections of neighboring tracts, and also to provide, when mixed with cement brought down from Redwood City by landing barges, low cost concrete for Carmel architects to work with. But it all seemed too, too, vast—almost immoral—an undertaking without a Federal loan in there somewhere.

The Multi-Mouth division meanwhile worried about this and that. Would it never come across an engineer! And in summer, the river flow does get very low indeed. You'd have to propose, PUMPING SEA WATER BACK OVER THE GUARD BAR and letting it run back out the lowest multi-mouth, this to keep the mouth basin waters sweet and clear and slightly saline. And not even Dr. A. J. Bolin knows what kind of fish that would attract. It might cause a mutation into fishes every bit as synthetic as Nylon.

Still, as an indication of how the populace as a whole would respond to the idea, that nice lady who had lived in Carmel 37 years did seem encouraging. She was pleased rather than offended at the possibility of more houses fronting on her favorite view, as would be one inevitable result of the project. She wished again, as on the evening that we met, that the sheet of water were there permanently "to make it real pretty." And the Carmel Rod and Raft Club was intended to become concerned with practical development toward that specific purpose.

It was pretty well accepted between the intended president and the intended treasurer that I was to be the intended corresponding secretary, the one who would write things, including the annual report of the organization for 1944 which follows: "Carmel River, when in spate still carries Carmel Valley acres out to sea."

POETRY

ON HIS OWN SHOULDERS

A bird is tamed when a wing is broken,
The fleetest brute is enslaved and taken
When his feet are snared in a fast tether;
They molt and grow lean, renouncing kingdoms.

But man, the first primate, mends his pinions,
Inheritor between hell and heaven,
On his own shoulders he heaves from pitfalls,
His habitat is a far country.

While he licks his wounds he tends a vision,
He turns new arms in retreat and defeat,
At death the high spark beckons his fellow
On the slow strait steep to each man's dreaming

—Alex R. Schmidt

NOW ITALY

Now Italy
Confronts us with her olive groves,
Her ancient, silvery names.
Land without youth receives our blood.
This is a nearer place to memory, to truth,
Than Dakar was, than thin, gale-wrapped Attu.

Raphael came from here,
Madonnas of infinite grace
He painted in chapels of Rome;
This was his field, his shore.

Now driving slowly in,
Cassino yields, and snow.
Holed mountains, black ravines
Point us the way we go.

—Kathryn E. Scoville

BLACK MIRROR

There is nothing to see in the stillness
But the glittering silver track
Of planets and dust of planets.
The lake is dreaming and black.
Invisible pines in the deepness;
Unseen, the long granite scars—
But caught in obsidian water
The wavering fire of stars.
Wherever I am I'll remember
That somewhere, waiting, apart,
A dark lake gleams on the mountain—
And stars burn in its heart.

REVIEWS

New Cook Book Helps to Keep Living Gracious

By DORA HAGEMEYER

A very delightful cook book has just come to our office for review. It is called "Economy for Epicures" and is by Mary L. R. Taylor who is a friend of Mrs. David O'Neil, well-known visitor to Carmel. This gives it the little touch of special interest which singles it out and makes us feel we should know more about it.

In the first place it is a very handsome book in its lettuce-green cover with a modern culinary design. It is well-printed and beautifully spaced. It falls open and stays open, a very important feature in a cook book, and moreover, it is sprinkled throughout with the cleverest little drawings, playfully executed and whimsically arranged.

The recipes are numbered and indexed, and there are reference numbers for the recipe whenever a special food is referred to in a menu. Once familiar with the very simple system of the book, one should find it a joy to use.

In these times of war shortages we are all inclined to fall down a little in the matter of variety and inventiveness in planning our menus, and it is just here that "Economy for Epicures" will be found most helpful and inspiring. The plain vegetables or meat or fruit will be found to be merely the base for a dozen delightful variations of texture and taste, and the many new and interesting combinations of available foods will help the home-maker to prove that what you cook is only partly as important as how you cook it.

Cooking has become creative. Imagination is a lively ingredient of these interesting yet simple recipes. A hundred tricks and turns the ordinary housekeeper has not thought of make plain food a thing of zest and delight. To be creative is to take your material and to form it into something new. Many tasteless war-time meals could be transformed by the addition of a little creative imagination such as will be found within the pages of this book.

And realizing that time is an important factor in any cooking program these days, the author has reserved a section for "Quick Recipes." These are clever little jiffy ideas which will appeal to the war-worker who wishes her cooking to be dainty and attractive but has so little time to make it so. Altogether, we heartily recommend "Economy for Epicures" as an answer to the problem of how to maintain gracious living despite war-time restrictions and extra duties.

Martin Gambee, Desert Painter, Opens One Man Show At Gallery Wednesday

month. I didn't paint their way, and I didn't want to."

For the next two years he worked hard, but in his own way, visiting galleries and museums, studying with Andre Lhote, the French modernist, and painting. One winter was spent in Munich, where the Gambees lived just around the corner from one Herr Adolf Hitler, whose brownstone house was at the time undergoing extensive remodeling and redecorating.

When he returned to New York in 1933, Martin Gambee was ready to enter, and did, every group exhibition of oils within a reasonable radius. He became a member of the Salmagundi Club and exhibited there. Critics recognized this new young painter, just returned from his studies abroad, as something far more than a good student of a good teacher.

In 1936 he happened upon a magazine article about the Rainbow Bridge-Monument Valley Expedition, about to embark upon some interesting excavations in northern Arizona. Exploration of the West had always stimulated his imagination. He sat down at once and wrote a letter, asking if the unit wanted to take along an artist. That was Monday. On Tuesday a wire arrived, suggesting that he meet with the director on Wednesday. On Friday, having used the interim to assemble paints and other equipment, he departed with the Expedition.

Martin Gambee spent not only that summer among the Navajos, but returned in 1937 and 1938, learning more and more about that little-explored region, absorbing its vivid colors, gaining a deeper sympathy and reverence for its people, and at first from necessity, then from preference, finding a new medium for his work. He had studied water color under Eliot O'Hara at the artist's school in Maine, and when he went to Arizona he brought with him both kinds of paint. His first studies were done in oil, however, and it was not until he had sad experience with the Arizona "twisters" which blew a film of sand over his wet canvas, that he turned to water colors. Almost immediately he found that he worked better with them, that they were a far truer medium in which to express the country.

"I lost interest in oils after that," he states. "I have never gone back to them."

During his summers in the Navajo country Mr. Gambee entered fully into the life of its inhabitants, finding them simple, kindly folk, with no greed for money and once their full confidence had been won, rsponsive and possessed of a distinctive sense of humor. At first he had difficulty in sketching or photographing them, for they cherished a religious belief that the devil always inhabited one of two identical things. It was disconcerting to have his model disappear as soon as he glanced away. Bit by bit, however, he overcame their resistance, until finally their willingness to pose for him resulted in drawing down upon his head the concerted ire of a group of news photographers assembled on the occasion of a Navajo Mud Dance.

Martin Gambee had long before been initiated into the Mud Dance rites—a combination of healing and rain-bringing ceremonials. Originally Navajos rolled their fellows in the mud for medicinal purposes, but by Mr. Gambee's day, they had begun to do it out of sheer fun—and they got him three times in spite of his best sprinting. Apparently he had taken it in a spirit of good sportsmanship, for when he appeared along with the professional photographers at his last Mud Dance, the medicine man tied a rag on his arm to distinguish him from the others, admitted him to a close-up with his camera and shooed the others off 200 yards.

"They were sure I'd bought my way in," he chuckles. "They almost lynched me."

On another occasion, Martin Gambee found himself almost too popular for comfort. That was when he attended a Squaw Dance, which derives from the ancient greetings accorded by the squaws to their braves returning from battle. This would seem to be a Navajo version of "ladies' choice," since each man who is chosen by a damsel must keep on dancing with her to the monotonous rhythm until he pays a dime for a forfeit. Mr. Gambee was seized upon firmly by two of the maidens who refused to let him bow out even after he had expended a pocketful of dimes and was reduced to a metal sales tag. They were aided and abetted in this by their relatives huddled about the fire, and in desperation he appealed to the tribal police. It was finally decided that he could go if he would put his finger on some substitute victim with dimes in his pocket.

"I didn't have the heart, though," Mr. Gambee confessed ruefully. "What I did was break away and run like a turkey."

The Gambee family had established a home at Pawling, New York, but by 1940 the urge to go nomading among the Navajos in toto led Mr. Gambee to purchase a trailer and build into it a number of amazing conveniences and gadgets for a western trek. Northern Arizona had been the ultimate goal, but meanwhile Martin Gambee's friend, Colonel L. L. Kotzebue, was transferred to Fort Ord. The two had talked often of camouflage, about which Martin Gambee had some pioneering ideas, and in response to a call from Colonel Kotzebue, he came early in 1940 to assist with a demonstration of camouflage at Fort Ord. The family, in snowbound northern Arizona, read with skepticism his letters descriptive of roses blooming in Carmel. By the end of August 1941 they rejoined him here, intending to stay a little while—and have inhabited Carmel ever since.

After the declaration of war, Mr. Gambee worked for a time in San Francisco with the Corps of Engineers; then in San Diego he made illustrations for pilots' and service men's instruction manuals for Consolidated Aircraft. In November of last year he started flying at Phoenix, with the intent of entering airplane transport duty, and is now completing a flight instruction course there, from which he was at home in Carmel on a brief leave last week.

Since 1933 Martin Gambee's paintings have appeared in exhibitions throughout the country, in the Corcoran Gallery, Washington, D. C., at the National Academy, with the American Water Color society and among other distinguished showings. He has held two one-man shows in Buffalo, three in New York and one apiece in Santa Fe, Gallup, New Mexico, Flagstaff, at Scripps College, Claremont and last month in San Francisco. His paintings are to be found among the permanent collections of the Museum of New Mexico, in the Albany Institute of History and Art and at the Philadelphia Art Alliance. In November, 1942, when the Artists for Victory exhibition was held at the Metropolitan Museum in New York, and five hundred pictures by representative artists were selected from 14,000 entries, Martin Gambee's Dark Mountain was among the chosen paintings. This same water color included in the current exhibition at the Carmel Art Association Gallery, was singled out for no less than three honors last year: the First Shaw water color prize at the Salmagundi club, in New York, Honorable Mention at the New Haven Paint and Clay club and Honorable Mention at the Oakland Art Gallery. His painting entitled Rhythm was adjudged the winner of the Second prize for water color in last year's statewide exhibition at Santa Cruz.

Arizona Highways, published monthly by the Arizona highway department and devoted to the story of the land and its people, included in its issue of August, 1941, an article on Painting in Arizona by Martin Gambee, illustrated by a number of black and white reproductions of his paintings. Now this same magazine has in preparation an issue containing an insert of several reproductions in full color.

The work of Martin Gambee, according to the editors, is "an indication of what exciting things can happen when a sincere artist gets into Arizona back country where the scenery bears the mark of the centuries and where simple people still live and die as they have always lived and died, unadorned with the more blatant embellishments of our own time and tempo. Arizona is a challenge to the artist. Martin Gambee, at least, has tried to accept the challenge. He shows that he values a worthy antagonist."

"The invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead." These words from Romans comprise the Golden Text to be used Sunday, March 12, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts. The subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "Substance."

Included among the Scriptural selections will be: "Then answered Jesus and said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise," (John 5: 19).

The following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included: "As God is substance and man is the divine image and likeness, man should wish for, and in reality has, only the substance of good, the substance of Spirit, not matter," (p. 301).

SUNSET SCHOOL NOTES

The Early Romans

The early Romans considered their army and their farms and the political rights the most important things in their city. They lived a simple life with very few comforts.

They lived in huts with no windows and only a hole in the roof for smoke to come out and the sun to come in. Their clothes were very simple too, for all a man had was a tunic, and whenever he would go outside, he would wrap a white woolen blanket around himself gracefully.

He called his garment a toga. They did not wear hats or stockings but they did wear sandals. Next to his family a Roman loved his farm. They raised turnips, beans, onions, cabbage, figs, plums, and pears.

To me he is of dogs, the king.
He is a Collie, black and white,
And if you pet him, he won't bite.
King has a ball that's colored red
He'd rather play with it than be fed.

Rain

The rain is wet! When it rains we get out of school a half hour earlier because we have only a half hour for lunch. I like rainy day sessions.

My Trip

One day I had just come home from school and I saw my mother packing. I asked her what she was packing for. She said that we were going to spend the week end at an army vacation depot out on Moro Island in Panama City Bay.

We started out, the next day on the train. At 11:30 we arrived in Balboa and went to Quiry Heights. There we met the Rockwoods at their home. Col. Rockwood had a little tame honey bear, but I was afraid to pet him because he did bite. He had a long tail about eighteen inches long and he loved bananas, papayas, and mangoes. We ate lunch at their house. At about two o'clock we all went out to Fort Amador and boarded a small coast artillery boat which took us out to Moro Island.

We did not get to go swimming that day but the next day we did. At about 6:00 a.m. the tide goes out and leaves a sand bar so that one can walk across to Toboga where there is a little village. Trucks and bikes cannot go there. At about 5:30 the tide comes in and it is twelve feet deep. The only kind of drinking water is iron water. One day the honey bear was lost up in the jungle, but he came back the day before we left. On Sunday afternoon we walked across the bar and looked over the village. It was siesta time and everyone was asleep.

Well, the next day, we left. It was July 4th, and a holiday, so we did not have to worry about school.

—Billy Lyon, grade 6

"Pete"

Sunday I went to Mrs. Florence Lockwood's home to have my picture painted. While I was there, Pete, her little parrot, Mrs. Lockwood and I had a pleasant chat. We talked about what Pete was going to have for supper. Pete hadn't been quite as talkative as usual until we mentioned his supper, then he was a little more interested.

When I left, Pete said, "Hello," to me. He was just a little mixed up. —Carol Forsberg, grade 5

I used to have a little kitten. She was black and white. Her name was Nana. She had a small white stripe down the middle of her nose. She followed my mother to school one day. She got lost. I miss her very much.

—Tania Tarras, grade 3

On day my dog caught a rat by the tail. The rat turned and bit my dog on the nose. My dog howled and let the rat go.

Peter Newell, grade 3

Bird Friends

There is a bush outside our house with some berries on it. We never eat them because they are not good for us, but the birds just love them. In the morning, or anytime of day, we see many robins on that bush eating the berries. We love to watch them. Robins are very pretty birds.

—Yvonne Beehl, grade 5

Gladys Atkinson

The many Carmel friends of Mrs. Gladys Atkinson learned with regret of her death last week at her home in San Francisco. Widow of the late William Atkinson, who was for many years engaged in business in Shanghai, Mrs. Atkinson spent much of her life in the Orient. With her two daughters, Mrs. Barbara Klotz and Mrs. Lynden Farnsworth, she recently made her home for a year in Carmel.

Do you want to know how to save the life of your appliances?
The Lady of the House
AND HER MECHANICAL SERVANTS
KEEP THIS BOOK HANDY
In this 32-page booklet are many "trouble shooting" suggestions and many, many homey hints on how to keep your appliances working at peak performance, through care to avoid repair.

Your appliances will have to work as never before in '44. You will be doing more laundry at home. Gasoline rationing means you will have to buy food in larger quantities when you shop. You will be doing more cooking and all of your housework. Last year this company brought out the first edition of the booklet, "The Lady of the House and Her Mechanical Servants." We distributed many thousands of copies. But apparently this amount was not enough. Now we have printed a second edition. If you have not received a copy of this booklet or cannot find the one you got last year, come into any company office today and get your FREE copy.

Dr. J. E. Crowther Tells Auxiliary Of Trips Abroad

Because Miss Celia Seymour, who was to have given a program on Mexican art and customs, was called out of town, Dr. James E. Crowther, pastor, filled the hour for the Women's Auxiliary of the Church of the Wayfarer with delightful "Reflections of a Traveler." He described the first ocean voyage of himself and his wife from England to this country, leading to a small pastorate in Dakota with the incongruous proximity of church and jail, and the growing determination to get a college education.

Life long activities in connection with the missionary program of the Methodist Church took him to many countries, where the work was educational and medical as well as religious, work which he studied in order that the program might have adequate support in this country. He attended the first Institute of Pacific Relations, held in Honolulu, where leaders in international affairs faced the growing problems of the Pacific realistically. Another interesting journey was the Crowthers' fourth visit to England, when they took their car and visited 44 cathedrals —Canterbury with a 900-year history—and 61 parish churches. The high point of this trip was the annual conference of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, which opened with 1000 ministers and an equal number of laymen singing "Te Deum" without accompaniment.

Another important tour was with the Sherwood Eddy seminar in 1934, visiting the countries of Europe and holding conferences with outstanding leaders in each. They were in Berlin just after the "blood purge," and felt the tension. They saw the review in Moscow of 400,000 Russian youths, boys and girls, marching with free athletic stride through the Red ter his brother's death, Willis White accepted the pastorate at Colton, California until he was called to take charge of the Presbyterian Church at Chico where he married Sarah Elizabeth Williams.

During Rev. White's eleven years in Chico he built a new church, organized a boys' club which held its meetings at his home and which he took on camping trips to the mountains during the summer. With the help of his sister, Martha, he founded a night school for Chinese boys which later included Chinese women and is still functioning.

In Santa Rosa where he had his next pastorate, he also had a boys' club, started a playground in a vacant lot behind his church for the children, and supervised their play.

He resigned his pastorate in Santa Rosa when, on the death of General and Mrs. Bidwell it was learned that they had willed a part of their estate to the Presbyterian Board and had requested that Rev. White should be president of a college to be established in the same mansion in Chico where the wedding reception had been held for him and his bride. As the land around the mansion was not sufficient for a campus, the plans for the college were abandoned by the Board, and Rev. White accepted a pastorate in Bakersfield because, "It is considered the hardest field in the Synod."

For seventeen years he was pastor to the people of Kern county. During that period, the church burned and he was offered the pastorate of a church at Stamford, Connecticut, which carried double the salary he was receiving. His answer was, "My congregation is in a hole and I must pull them out." With John Galen Howard, he planned the new church building which was finally completed with a memorial window in honor of boys and girls of Bakersfield who had given their lives in the World War. The stained glass had been sent by friends to Rev. White from the shattered cathedrals of Europe.

Besides carrying on his church work he was active in the Civic Commercial Organization, Music Association, and Art Association. He was a member of the Rotary Club, a Thirty-Third Degree Mason and also a Shriner. So popular was he with the young people that the Bakerfield high school football team initiated him an honorary member to their Big B Club.

When his health failed and it was known that he would have to retire, the people gathered from all sections of Kern county at a banquet given in his honor and presented him with a purse of $1300 as token of their gratitude.

Eleven years ago he and Mrs. White moved to Carmel where they had a summer home. Here, as everywhere, he soon won the affection and respect of all who came in contact with him.

As he loved the out-of-doors, his relatives are arranging for a memorial service to be held in some Carmel garden, probably the Biblical garden of the Church of the Wayfarer. Dr. J. E. Crowther of the Church of the Wayfarer, Rev. Carol Hulsewe of All Saints Church, and Rev. Stewart C. Potter of the Presbyterian Church of Monterey will be asked to officiate at the memorial services.

In addition to his wife, Rev. White leaves his daughter, Mrs. Francis H. Herrick of Oakland, his son, Major William Gail White, a brother, Thomas A. White, Nevada City, two sisters, Mrs. George Moore, Ridgeway, North Carolina and Miss Margaret E. White, Carmel; three nieces, Mrs. H. F. Kelses, Hawaii; Mrs. Donald Kirtland, Redwood City and Mrs. Jack Tugwell, Los Angeles; five grandchildren: Mariam E. Herrick, Charles Putnam Herrick, Margaret Josephine Herrick, Earle Bennett White and John Bidwell White.

Square past the tomb of Lenin. They attended the last Passion Play at Oberammergau, and the League of Nations in Geneva, where university youth leaders sought to have that body outlaw the use of airplanes for war purposes.

The last trip was to the Orient in 1937, in part for Mrs. Crowther's health, visiting Manila, China, Japan. Already the disturbance by Japan was beginning, and Shanghai was bombed the day after they sailed from that port. Dr. Crowther spoke of several books of value in getting a true picture of conditions in Russia and India.

Mrs. Grace Howden, president, conducted the meeting. Mrs. William P. Booth, whose husband is stationed at Fort Ord, conducted the devotions, in which she read two letters, one from a soldier, one from a sailor, seeking for stability and religious enlightenment in the troubled world.

Thibet is the seat of the Buddhist religion and one curious custom of the Thibetans is the tearing of 100,000 printed prayers into bits, which are then put into a bowl and turned over once a day, thus crediting the believer with that amount of protection against evil. Butter is used as a medium of exchange and is also burned in religious lamps.

In comparison to water buffalo, women are of little value in Thibet. Since it is easier to get another wife than to get another buffalo, the custom is to place a woman before the buffalo in hitching them to a cart or plow, so that she can break the ground first. However, a movement to improve the status of woman is afoot.

A social hour followed Dr. Ewan's talk. Those in charge were Mrs. William Heathorne, Mrs. J. M. Dickinson, Mrs. Joseph Hooper and Mrs. Helen Palmtag.

Judge On Dignity With City Council Over Monthly Report

Some as yet unidentified city councilman must have joggled City Judge George P. Ross' elbow in re: "Why did fines in city court fall to about two thirds below average in January?" because the Judge, in his February report to the city council submitted this week comments with considerable dignity from his high horse:

"Gentlemen: I have been asked to give a little more data in my report. I must confess that February has given me little if anything to brag about.

"One case of dog trouble, very minor, and one wayward son that imbibed too freely. I have been approached in my capacity as judge to act as chief justice, gestapo, high executioner and twister of slanderous tongues, i.e. I have been asked to order police to remove a tenant bodily from a house, because the landlady did not want the tenant longer, slightly beyond my jurisdiction, and further OPA would object. I was asked to stop slanderous statements against one of the fair sex. I have had several such requests. This shows that my time is not wholly my own. Thirty five traffic matters have been handled, plus some overdue ones, plus written demands for appearances. As a cash customer I show a low return for February, but that does not mean I have been wholly idle."

The cash he turned in for the month, $133.00 was derived from $20.00 fines assessed for general offenses against the law and $113.50 for traffic violations.

Red Cross

By HELEN A. FIELD

On Wednesday, March 8, thirteen Carmel Chapter Gray Ladies received their veils at a Capping Ceremony held at the Station Hospital at Fort Ord. They have now achieved full status as Gray Ladies of the American Red Cross. To realize their great, their very human, help at Fort Ord Hospital one needs only to study the window exhibit, so suggestive of their activities, which may be seen on Dolores street between Ocean and Seventh. Those who graduated on Wednesday are: Mrs. David Alberto, Mrs. T. S. Arms, Mrs. A. B. Calder, Mrs. E. B. Ely, Mrs. Edwin Eaton, Mrs. J. R. Finley, Mrs. George Gordon, Mrs. L. O Kellogg, Mrs. Fred Locke, Mrs. H. D. Lyon, Mrs. Ernest Leffingwell, Mrs. R. Neumann, Mrs. Louis C. Ralston. Mrs. Mark J. Mourne also will get a diploma though she has left Carmel and so could not be present at the graduation ceremony.

Several workers who have held important places in the Production Room at Carmel Chapter of American Red Cross have left Carmel. Mrs. Goodwin, Chairman of Production, says that there is need for others to take their places. Can you sew? Can you cut out material to make lounging robes, pajamas and other garments to be made for our service men? If so, come to Red Cross Chapter Headquarters without delay. We need you.

Give to the Red Cross War Fund Campaign—give again—give more. Our service men are in sore need of Red Cross help at home and overseas.
